

Young musos cross the ditch to perform

THE Hills Music Academy recently played host to a group of young musicians from Manurewa High School in Auckland, New Zealand.

The two groups combined strengths to form a band of 100 young instrumentalists for an evening of music and fun.

“It was a great opportunity to work with such a large and responsive group,” Manurewa High conductor Yih-hsin Huang said.

“We do not get many opportunities to do this in New Zealand.”

The academy’s music director, Garry Clark, said this was a great example of how music brings people from all places together.